SAGEM

The Babcock Onshore completions centre at Gloucestershire Airport recently carried out the first in-house upgrade of an Airbus Helicopters EC135T2 to the latest 73 configuration for a new contract. Previously the work was carried out by the manufacturer. The upgrade programme required a number of external modifications to the helicopters, including the use of composites to relocate air intakes, as well as installing new flight controls and main rotor blades.

Westcan Aviation in Kamloops, British Columbia imported into Canada two former US Federal Bureau of Investigation Bell 412EP helicopters from Florida in November. Both aircraft previously registered as N37GR (serial 36209) and N223JC (serial 36106), came via Aircraft Associates and were delivered by road.

Helicopteres Guimbal has received approval from the US Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) to uprate the power available from the G2 Cabri helicopter Lycoming 0360-J2A engine. The approval follows a similar clearance by the European Aviation Safety Agency in June 2017.

Service Bulletin 17-009 allows the pilot to increase the power from the previous 145hp maximum to 160hp, with no negative implications to operating costs or additional inspections. Previously Helicopteres Guimbal had deliberately restricted the power through the on-board engine management computer (EPM), but changes to the software will now allow pilots to make full use of the available power in the engine. Although the in-ground effect hover numbers remain unchanged, this will be especially beneficial in hot/high areas, during takeoffs from tight areas and during flight training, where the extra power will improve safety margins.

The Cabri G2 fleet has now logged almost 140,000 flight hours worldwide, with no serious injuries to date and the 215th aircraft was on the production line at Aix-en-Provence in early November.
